

Hello again my Beautiful Sisters and Brothers.,

My it is as if time flies while dragging along. Spring is trying to get itself going, yet Mother Nature has had her own ideas. With the cold fronts with snow/rain in them it is kind of hard to get work done in the yard.

I have started clearing up the old plants that I leave on the ground to cover up and protect bulbs and seeds through the winter. Found blooming crocus that I forgot I planted their tiny bulbs 5 or so years ago. That was quite a blessed surprise. Now my hyacinths are growing buds, and roses are trying to leaf out. So I am planting more seed and bulbs for the new year of flowers.

It's always nice to soak up the sun and the growing warmth of it filling ones heart with itself. Got some red on my face on Sunday while riding the atv in the hills. Making the cabin fever and depression fleet away some. Being locked down for over a year now has not been kind to so many people in so many different ways. I feel for those that suffer from depression; knowing its hard on a regular day to cope, much less during these very oppressed times we have all been through.

My hopes for this new season of life is that we all get out and fill ourselves with the warmth of nature. Mother Earth has so much natural healing, even just sitting and listening to the birds sing is therapeutic. I love working with the soil and plant things that draw in humming birds and butterflies, so I can watch their beauty. As nature moves forward so does the photographic opportunities for us shutterbugs.

On a brighter note: with the county here being green for a few weeks now Aztec will have its first in person meeting this Thursday. We will have a quick one to get all of our business done before WM and WP go on their planned vacation. It brings excitement within myself; and hopes that very soon we can all be back to in person meetings, and having Official visits filled with laughter and of course a hug or two.

So, lets all get out and warm ourselves up a bit and fill our hearts with the new hopes that come with the new life of Spring!

Star Love,
